

Are you pursuing a degree in public health, environmental, life sciences, food science, dietetics or nutrition? How would you like to earn some extra money AND gain on-the-job experience in your area of study?!! Sounds good? If so, we would really like to talk with you!

NSF International is one of the leading global experts in food safety and we're growing! We have opportunities in multiple locations throughout the U.S. for part time Food Safety Specialists to consult with our clients on how to serve food safely to the public. You'll need to be able to travel to local supermarkets and to some of your favorite local restaurants, so reliable transportation and a valid driver's license is required. Working part time means only working about 10-15 flexible hours a week - you set your own work schedule while having the ability to work from your home.

- Our Food Safety Specialists help our clients by conducting audits (inspections) at retail establishments that sell or serve food.
- After you conduct your audit, you will summarize, evaluate and document the results by consistently interpreting audit guidelines; score audits.
- Then you'll communicate your audit findings/results with client site management or the appropriate client staff.
- You may need to collect food, product, or environmental samples from client sites and ship the samples to the appropriate laboratories for testing (we'll provide you with everything you need to accomplish this important task).
- Communication is key in this position because you may need to investigate and resolve complaints. You'll also need to establish and maintain effective communication with food safety staff at NSF's headquarters as it relates to your assigned clients.
