“The True Meaning of the Separation of Church and State”

Edward Tabash

Chair, National Legal Committee,
Americans United for Separation of Church and State

Edward Tabash graduated magna cum laude from UCLA in 1973 and from Loyola Law School of Los Angeles in 1976. He is a constitutional lawyer in Beverly Hills. He currently chairs the national legal committee for Americans United for Separation of Church and State and also Chairs the First Amendment Task Force for the Center for Inquiry. He has filed numerous briefs with both the United States Supreme Court and the California Supreme Court, arguing for the separation of church and state.

His position is that the Founders intended a nation in which government cannot favor believers over non believers and in which no branch of government can treat anyone differently because of either accepting or rejecting any tenet of religious faith. He will be addressing the question of the “True Meaning of Separation of Church and State” and will give a comprehensive overview of the founding of the First Amendment and of the current threat of the religious right to modern freedoms in today’s United States.
