Major Grant Will Benefit Northridge's Marilyn Magaram Center

$250,000 from Drown Foundation to Support Nutrition Programs, Upgrade Food Sciences Lab

A recent $250,000 award from the Joseph Drown Foundation will fund programs at the Marilyn Magaram Center and help upgrade the center's state-of-the-art food sciences laboratory in Cal State Northridge's Department of Family and Consumer Sciences.

The bulk of the award will support special program expenses, lecture honoraria, stipends and fellowships, faculty, equipment and administration.

Part of the grant, earmarked for facility upgrades in the food sciences lab, will provide for modifications to the sensory evaluation units used to test the way people perceive the influences of color, light and aroma on food. The lab features four kitchen vignettes—two commercial and two residential designs.

Magaram Center director Tung-Shan Chen said the grant enables the center to continue programs that benefit students, the community and professionals, among them the center's Childhood Obesity Prevention program, its Metabolic Syndrome Conference, its Nutrition Lecture and Brown Bag educational films, and internship programs that allow students to apply their acquired knowledge toward educating the community and designing nutritious diets and meals.

"The grant is a very important part of upgrading the food sciences lab," said Helen Castillo, dean of the College of Health and Human Development, which also plans to use the foundation monies to fund continuing research efforts and community outreach projects.

Founded in 1953, The Drown Foundation focuses its resources on education, medical and scientific research, community, health and social services, and the arts and humanities. It supports public and private K-12 school education programs, as well as programs that tackle high drop-out rates, teen pregnancy, insufficient health care, substance abuse and violence. In addition, the foundation concerns itself with poverty issues and programs that assist the economically and physically disadvantaged. ■

University to Inaugurate New Merit Awards at May Ceremony

Presidential Award Will Replace Employee of the Year Recognition; Other New Merit Awards to Debut

The Cal State Northridge Presidential Award will make its debut as the university's top merit honor at the annual Staff Service Recognition Awards ceremony on May 13.

President Jolene Koester will present the award to the staff member or administrator who "demonstrates consistently outstanding performance and who serves as a role model for other people by living the values of the university."

The honoree will have 1) set a high standard of performance over a significant period of time, 2) helped bring about productivity gains or cost savings by developing or improving processes, and 3) demonstrated exceptional university citizenship.

Replacing the Employee of the Year recognition, the Presidential Award will be the highest in an array of new awards applauding the "extraordinary" contributions of staff and administrators.

"Though both longtime service and extraordinary contributions are important to the health and vitality of the university, we want to provide more opportunities for recognition of the wonderful things people are doing at Cal State Northridge," said Robert Foldesi, assistant vice president for human resources.

In order to create more such opportunities, Foldesi said, up to ten CSUN Awards of Merit will be presented for the first time to staffers or administrators who exemplify exceptional performance and whose integrity and service to CSUN have been fully demonstrated.

Criteria for the merit awards are: 1) outstanding performance over a significant period, 2) adding to university productivity or cost savings by developing or improving processes, and 3) exemplary university citizenship.

A new CSUN Team Award will go to one or more teams—made up of at least three individuals—whose project or initiative brings about "radical, positive change" that improves performance, image and/or productivity, or that reduces costs.

The Presidential Award winner will receive a $500 cash award and a framed certificate, and Award of Merit winners will receive certificates and $200 cash awards. Team winners will be awarded up to $1,000 for purchases benefiting the team, such as equipment, conference travel, or software.

Nominations for the new awards are being accepted now at the Office of Human Resources, or by e-mail at valerie.myers@csun.edu. Forms are available at www-admn.csun.edu/hrs/comp/awards/presidential_award.doc.

For more information about the new awards, call Valerie Myers, manager of Human Resource Services, at (818) 677-7421. ■

Wells Fargo Presents Northridge Athletics with $50,000 Gift

Officials Present Check at Grand Opening of Bank's First University Branch in California

Wells Fargo Regional President Vince Liuzzi presented Cal State Northridge Athletics Director Richard Dull with a $50,000 check to mark the February 2 grand opening of the company's new banking store in the University Student Union.

"This department has been privileged to enjoy a four-year relationship with Wells Fargo Bank as a corporate sponsor," Dull said. "We look forward to the continuation of our relationship with the bank for years to come. Wells Fargo has been an outstanding partner in our efforts to provide for the academic and athletic education of our student athletes."

With the contribution, Wells Fargo has donated $200,000 to support men's and women's athletic programs at CSUN during the past four years. Liuzzi, the San Fernando Valley regional president for Wells Fargo, said the banking institution also cherishes its relationship with the university.

"Wells Fargo's gift to the Cal State Northridge Athletic Department supports the athletic endeavors of hundreds of student athletes whose experiences in the field or on the court will help them in the classroom, in their careers and in the game of life," Liuzzi said.

The new Wells Fargo branch at CSUN—the company's first "university-based" banking store in California—offers students, faculty and staff conveniently located ATMs, computer terminals and bankers on campus.

Wells Fargo has a long history of supporting Cal State Northridge. Only two years ago, the bank pledged $1 million to help prepare future teachers and aspiring business leaders.

The gift funded a university endowment that permanently supports special Wells Fargo scholarships for Cal State Northridge students studying to be teachers. It also helped expand the university's small business center, which was renamed the Wells Fargo Center for Small Business and Entrepreneurship. The center, which has operated for more than 25 years, provides training for students and services to small business owners in the region. ■

Jerry Luedders Is Named University's New Assistant Provost

A 'Strategic Thinker,' Says Provost Harry Hellenbrand of Former Music Department Chair

Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs Harry Hellenbrand has appointed Jerry Luedders, previously interim executive assistant to the provost, as Cal State Northridge's new assistant provost. The appointment was effective January 1.

In addition to serving as chief of staff to Provost Hellenbrand, Assistant Provost Luedders will undertake a broad range of administrative responsibilities, collaborating with the administrative teams in Academic Affairs and other divisions.

"I am pleased to be able to support the priorities of the provost and the university," said Luedders. "We share the belief that a collaborative environment helps our students achieve their educational goals. I hope my background in academic affairs, my work with university divisions and my teamwork with vice presidents on campus-wide projects will contribute to that environment."

The assistant provost, who brings to his new post more than 38 years of higher education experience, will take a leadership role in enrollment management and retention strategies, learning-centered university initiatives and audit coordination.

"His experience and knowledge will serve him well in his new role," said Provost Hellenbrand, noting that Luedders served 17 years as professor and chair of CSUN's award-winning Music Department.

After completing undergraduate studies in music at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Luedders earned a master's degree from Indiana University, Bloomington. He taught at Indiana University and St. Cloud State University, and served as dean of fine arts and assistant professor at the College of St. Benedict. At Lewis and Clark College, he was named director and, later, director of graduate study at its School of Music.

"Mr. Luedders has demonstrated his commitment to academic excellence as a student-centered teacher/administrator who is an active scholar, performer, and conductor," the provost said, citing his appointee's dedication to strategic thinking and planning, outcomes assessment, fundraising, fiscal affairs and community involvement.

The assistant provost's leadership roles in national and regional music-related boards and commissions include service for more than 20 years as an on-site accreditation evaluator/consultant for the National Association of Schools of Music. ■

“What’s really exciting is the learning process—to be able to discuss ideas and brainstorm with some very smart people and possibly collaborate on research that could go in a new whole direction,” said Kioussis, who recently learned of his selection from KITP head David Gross, the 2004 Nobel Prize winner in physics.

The institute’s programs encompass particle and nuclear physics, astrophysics and cosmology, condensed-matter physics, atomic and molecular physics and emerging interdisciplinary fields such as biophysics, neurophysics and mathematical physics.

KITP scholars visit the facility in several one- to two-week stints during which they may initiate collaborative research and publication projects with the institute’s permanent faculty. They also are invited to take part in the institute’s workshops and conferences on topics ranging from deciphering the human genome to the hidden mysteries of ordinary matter. ■
