

California State University Northridge

Did
You Know...

Cal State Northridge has renamed the College of Engineering and Computer Science's auditorium in honor of former employee Clendon Robert "C.R." Johnson, who left more than $700,000 to the university when he died. The money will be used for scholarships and to support energy-related projects within the college.

You can discover the history of the San Fernando Valley by surfing Northridge's new San Fernando Historical Digital Library. The digital library represents a collaboration of 40 agencies, museums, libraries, historical societies and individuals. The data base, with some 2,500 rare images, is available to the public by visiting the web site at <http://digital-library.csun.edu/>.

Fulbright Scholar Doris Jones-Nicol, a CSUN professor in educational psychology and counseling professor, is currently lecturing and conducting AIDS research in South Africa.

Northridge's Minority Biomedical Research Support (MBRS) program has received two grants totaling more than $6 million from the National Institutes of Health to develop biomedical research and enhance research educational opportunities for students.

Seven hundred and ninety-five students were awarded teaching credentials by Cal State Northridge's College of Education in the academic year 1999-2000, making CSUN the state's leader in teacher preparation among public universities, according to the California Commission on Teacher Credentialing.

Vol. I · No. 3

Published by Office of Public Relations

(818) 677-2130