

Master of Social Work

Ventura County

Offered in Ventura County

The MSW program is offered online or at the Ventura County Superior Court (800 S. Victoria Ave). While CSUN's MSW is a 60-unit degree, students who participate in off-campus cohorts may be required to complete additional units to meet the specific Council on Social Work Education (CSWE) fieldwork requirements for each cohort/location.

Financial aid is available for those who qualify.

California State University, Northridge's MSW program provides advanced preparation for working professionals who seek careers focused on addressing the social services needs of people in Southern California and across the nation*.

This program emphasizes the enhancement of social services for urban clients through a strengths-based, community-oriented model of practice that also promotes social justice and includes a special sensitivity to the region's multinational and multicultural populations.

The MSW curriculum

- Prepares graduates to work successfully within a variety of environments, cultures and organizational systems;
- Emphasizes critical and creative thinking that enables graduates to initiate, evaluate and adapt interventions appropriate to the relevant contexts – local, regional, national or global; and
- Creates a context for professional, ethical and effective practice by incorporating content on the profession's history, philosophy and values.

MSW Field Education

CSUN's MSW program features a substantial field-education component that enables students to apply the concepts and practice the skills learned in their coursework as well as experience their own effectiveness in a variety of situations. In addition to academic classes, students begin participating in 16-hour weekly field placements, Monday through Friday, 9-5 p.m., starting their first semester of study.
