In the past two decades, hiring faculty en masse into multiple departments/colleges, or “cluster” hiring, has emerged as a practice to successfully bring on board a critical mass of interdisciplinary faculty. Cluster hiring also has been used to address other needs such as fostering interdisciplinary collaborations, launching new initiatives, broadening engagement with the community, and enhancing inclusivity. Our cluster consists of at least three (3) faculty members formed to support interdisciplinary scholarship, under the umbrella of “Water Resources.” It is anticipated that these faculty will develop new areas of inquiry showing promise of future scholarly activity that places CSUN in a strategic position of strength in the water sciences. Cluster faculty will be expected to engage in cross-departmental and / or cross-college interdisciplinary scholarship.

This group will form a nucleus of an advanced water team (cluster). This cluster will promote an interdisciplinary approach to water-resource science, sustainability, and management based on scholarly interests within the above listed departments.

Qualifications:
California State University, Northridge invites applications for three (3) full-time tenure-track appointments at the rank of Assistant Professor in the Departments of Civil Engineering and Construction Management, Geography, Geological Sciences, and Political Science, beginning August 23, 2017. The ideal candidates will have a strong interest and training in a subset of the general categories identified below. The areas of interest include, but are not limited to: surface-water hydrology and hydro-climatology, watershed processes, hydrogeology, applied mathematics and programming for surface and groundwater hydrologic modeling, and public policy with a particular focus on water in the western United States. Applicants must have a Ph.D. degree in a discipline appropriate for one of the listed departments or a related field of study by August 22, 2017. Evidence of degree(s) required at time of hire.

Applicants must provide evidence of outstanding commitment and demonstrated ability to research and teaching in an environment serving a diverse student population. Applicants with university teaching experience and evidence of commitment to teaching at the graduate and undergraduate levels are desired.

At time of appointment, the successful candidate, if not a U.S. citizen, must have authorization from the Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services to work in the United States.

Responsibilities:
This Cluster Hire in Water Resources promotes an interdisciplinary approach to water-resource science, sustainability, and management based on scholarly interests within several departments of the university. The proposed appointees will contribute to a workforce engaging multiple stakeholders, especially those focused on western United States water issues, and will build multidisciplinary research programs tied to the University’s strategic initiatives.

The successful candidates will join faculty devoted to water resources in the physical, engineering, and social sciences. Because this appointment is designed primarily for research, it requires a commitment to seeking extramural research funds and to academic advancement based mainly on research accomplishments and publications in leading scientific journals. Accordingly, the appointee will teach a reduced load of one course per semester and receive initial funding for summer research (later to be funded by grant monies) during the probationary period.

The successful candidate will be reviewed for the granting of retention, tenure and promotion based on effective research productivity as outlined by each department, while complying with the associated college standards for scholarly productivity, effective teaching, service to the department, university, and/or broader community, and professional responsibilities.

How to Apply:
In order to be considered in the initial review, applications must be submitted prior to the date listed below. Application submissions received after the application screening date will be reviewed at the discretion of the University. Application submissions must include the following: a letter of application, curriculum vitae, research statement and evidence of publication, teaching statement, statement of philosophy/experience working with students from diverse backgrounds, and three letters of recommendation.
