The flash project I created relates to what I am teaching in my 8th grade U.S. history class. I thought of animating how the “Checks and Balances” work in the United States. I started by having my title “Checks and Balances” blur in from the center and then come into focus. I then had a text box of Executive, Legislative, and Judicial fades in, from the center, then to the different corners of my work. Then the purple arrows extend outward pointing to the Legislative and the Judicial branch, followed by “Checks on Courts” and “Checks on Congress” coming from the corner of the work. The next order in the operation is the arrows that extend outward from the Legislative branch, followed by “Check on President” and “Check on Courts” coming from the corner of the work. The Judicial branch’s arrows are the next order in the animation, it extend outwards from the box and points to the Executive branch and the Legislative branch, followed by the text “Checks on president and “Check on Congress”. The last thing in the animation is the text boxes of the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial branched fading away and being replaced with a picture of where these representative meet.

This flash animation is on my website at http://www.csun.edu/~mc27984/618/index.html. You then click on Section 3 Animation; it will take to the project. Also my Bitmap project is in the same location. Just click Section 2 Bitmap.
