Qualifications:
A Doctorate degree in Health Administration, Business Administration, Public Health or a related disciplinary field from an accredited institution is required. ABDs will be considered but must have completed the terminal degree before August 1, 2020. Evidence of effective teaching is desired (i.e. student evaluations, peer evaluations, through letters of recommendations, etc.). Applicants must demonstrate ability and commitment to working, teaching and mentoring with a diverse student population. Experienced in the use of learning management systems, and innovative teaching techniques, which could include on-line teaching and instructional technology is desirable. Work experience in healthcare administration or other related field is desired.

At time of appointment, the successful candidate, if not a U.S. citizen, must have authorization from the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) to work in the United States.

Responsibilities:
The following are primary teaching competency areas: healthcare finance, economics, management theory, quantitative methods, law and ethics, and healthcare organization and delivery, at the undergraduate and graduate levels. In acknowledgement of the University’s and community’s diverse environment, it is expected that the potential candidate infuses in their teaching and scholarly work cultural competency/cultural humility. The successful candidate will also participate in various committees, student advisement, curriculum review, development and assessment, and other program functions. The successful candidate is expected to keep a scholarly agenda and make contributions to the field. The successful candidate is expected to actively participate in his or her professional societies/associations and maintain currency in the field of health administration or other related field. The successful candidate should conduct publishable research and attempt to secure external funding to support research and scholarly activity. The successful candidate may be required to teach on weekdays, evenings, weekends and possibly on-line.

The University especially seeks individuals who will contribute to both their chosen discipline and the University’s significant commitments to general education and undergraduate and graduate education.

The successful candidate will be held to the standards and requirements of the college and department in which he/she is housed for recommending tenure and promotion.
