Department of Communication Studies Presents:

COMS M.A. INFO SESSION

Virtual brown bag featuring:

- Program Overview
- Grad Life Expectations
- TA/ ISA positions + more!

First, second and third year MA candidates and TAs in the communication studies department have put together an information session about what it's like to be a masters student and/or teaching associate from the perspective of students. In this information session we will be giving a disciplinary overview of the different fields: rhetoric, intercultural, critical cultural, communication science and performance studies. We will then discuss research and talk about assistantships, publishing, conferences and much more. After that, we will discuss a little bit about the teaching associate program along with the opportunity to teach performance ensemble and forensics. Lastly, we will hold a Q&A session at the end for any questions students may have about the program.
