Meeting University Goals and Initiatives 2005-2006

Student Achievement

- Departments such as Geography have worked to improve graduation rates by development of online teaching for general education.

- CSBS has provided resources for Departments and the Advisement Center to increase availability to students of advisors with specialized knowledge of the student's major field.
- Departments have used assessment to plan for curriculum revision, modify course content, and enhance the effectiveness of student advisement.
- The Political Science Department participates in the U.S. Department of Education Title V Step Up to College Project to prepare freshmen and transfer students for a successful college experience.
- CSBS provides leadership to the Teachers for a New Era project.
- CSBS appointed a Coordinator for Teacher Education to take over supervision and advising for the existing Social Science Subject Matter Program.
- CSBS continued working toward implementation of the new SSSMP which will facilitate the entry into the teaching profession of students from a broadened range of social science majors.
- Departments and programs continued development of practicum and/or clinical courses.
- The College has rewarded Departments who are able to demonstrate their use of assessment in curriculum planning, leading to a high level of compliance with assessment guidelines and goals.

Campus Environment

- Departments have worked to put up hall displays that engage and inform students.
- Departments have worked to provide user-friendly systems for students and visitors, improving the signage, for example.
- Along with increase advisement services, some chairs have committed to "open door" policies where the chair becomes directly involved, at the earliest opportunity, to resolve student issues.
- Department have taken advantage of the University and College commitment to more effective communication with students by developing letters which welcome them and point the way to successful experiences at CSUN.
- CSBS, along with the College of Humanities, created a student-friendly gathering place on the first floor of Sierra Hall.
- The College has invested its resources so that all CSBS controlled classrooms are smart classrooms.
- Several departments completed renovations which will positively affect the physical environment in which students work.

Research, Scholarships, and Creative Achievement

- The College provided research support to the faculty in grants intended to encourage funding from outside sources. Some support was given to allow completion of on-going projects.
- The importance given to faculty research is highlighted by the fact that, in another year of budget challenges, the Dean allocated $73,893, nearly doubling the amount allocated in 2002-2003.

- Fifty-two members of the full-time faculty published scholarly research during 2005-2006. Collectively they produced 97 works.
- Forty-four members of the full-time faculty generated 93 grants, stipends, or other support for their research and activities.

Resources/Institutional Effectiveness

- All Departments and Programs sought increased outside funding. Geography, for example, received support for its programs from the California Foundation for Geographic Studies.
- Sociology was able to establish two new scholarships thanks to donations.
- A major part of the Geography Department's efforts has been devoted to the development of GIS, cartographic, and weather computer labs; upgrading and service of the five departmental servers, availability of a scanner and server to public in the Map Library, participation in Windows 2000 active directory pilot project; and campus-wide security hackles to its network.
- Urban Studies developed a strategic relation with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency whereby its students get access to research experience.
- Despite continuation of severe budget cuts, the College continued its commitment to consensus and consultation in planning for equity-based savings. As in the past, after extensive consultation with the Administrative Council, the Dean called an all-college meeting for discussion of the budget.
- The Dean and Director of Development, Anne Robison, implemented the College Development Plan, resulting in significant gifts to the college.
- In 2005-2006, the College was very pleased to receive its third Endowed Professorship through a bequest from Dr. Richard W. Smith, Emeritus Psychology Professor.
- Another retired emeritus professor, Dr. John Wayne Plasek, created the John J. Plasek Memorial Endowed Scholarship in Sociology with a gift of $10,000 in memory of his father.
- The College raised $886,707 in private donations (including foundation, corporate and individual support as well as pledge payments) a 39% increase over 2004-2005.
- Grants officer, Matt Terhune, began to see the fruits of his grant-writing workshops: in fiscal year 2006, the college enjoyed a 17% increase in grant monies over the last fiscal year to $1,990,879.
- CSBS received substantial grant and contract awards from the National Institute of Mental Health and the National Corporation for Community Service as well as unprecedented corporate underwriting of $45,000 support for the 17th Annual Envisioning California Conference.
- CSBS faculty secured prestigious fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and Kellogg Institute as well as significant contracts with the United Way of Los Angeles, Urban Wildlands Group, Mountains Restoration Trust, and the L.A. County Department of Probation.

Serving External Community

- The Geography Department serves as a resource for the community through the operation of the largest map collection in California and providing other geography related services.
- Faculty from various departments participate with area schools, providing guest lectures and organizing field trips.
- Faculty members serve on many community boards and commissions.
- The CSBS Center for Southern California Studies organized and hosted the Envisioning California Conference at the Marriott Hotel in Woodland Hills in September. The event was a major success, both financially and in terms of community impact. More than 250 of the 300 participants were not affiliated with CSUN.
- The first cohort of students in the bachelor's degree program in Public Sector Management were graduated in Santa Barbara. This program allows mid-level managers in the public sector to complete their degrees in their home communities.

Goals for 2006-2007

Along with goals aimed at continuing program success and increasing faculty positions, departments indicated particular concerns with the following:

- The Anthropology Department's intends to continue and to expand on its successful drive to attract new majors through a variety of community- and university-based activities, including recruitment visits to local junior colleges.
- The Geography Department is committed to completing its program assessment and to assess and develop new pedagogy for GE classes containing majors and non-majors.
- Geography also intends to organize alumni materials and outreach and set up a response system for donors.
- Pan African Studies is committed to increased recruitment efforts to increase the number of undergraduate majors.
- The Political Science Department wants to find ways to distribute the service and teaching workload more equitably among its faculty members.

College Goals for 2006-2007

In addition to providing the context and support in which departments and programs will work, CSBS is committed to providing leadership in the Provost's initiative for Planning. The college was the first to hold a planning retreat to set into motion this ongoing process. One accomplishment of the retreat was to focus each unit on the vision which drives the success of the college in support of the University mission.
