Desirable Qualifications

Familiarity with the CSUN campus and Educational Opportunity Programs. Prior experience teaching a first-year student success course that is embedded in a long term learning community/cohort. Demonstrated ability to teach in a condensed time format involving linked curriculum. Prior experience with “student centered” concepts (i.e., instruction that combines academic expertise with understanding of students’ lives)

Position Responsibilities

Must participate in professional development activities that focus on: teaching first time freshmen, such as, the University 100 Faculty, Mentor Training, Stretch Program Training and the EOP Transitional Bridge week long Training.

Expected to attend all pre and post Program planning meetings, Program briefings and “essay readings” in the summer, fall and spring phases of the Program. Effectively work with Program Mentors and EOP Staff. Must articulate Program mission, vision, goals, and strategy to colleagues and students.
Application Process: Applicants should forward a current resume and a cover letter that includes educational background (university degrees earned), prior teaching experience, other relevant professional experience, and/or relevant professional development, and contact information for the applicant. The cover letter should address the above listed minimum and desirable qualifications. All applicants must provide two written recommendations describing the applicant’s strengths as a teacher of first-time freshmen (applicants employed last year with recent letters of recommendations on file are exempt). Applicants are also encouraged to consider applying to teach University 100 in Fall 2017 through Academic First Year Experiences: see http://www.csun.edu/undergraduate-studies/university-100/faculty or email Dr Cheryl Spector at cheryl.spector@csun.edu
