However, while only 25.7% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions are considered “first-generation college students,” 52.2% of our CSUN freshmen are considered “first-generation college students.”

Like freshmen at other public 4-year institutions, most CSUN freshmen want to go the extra mile and achieve a higher degree. 71.2% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree. 70.8% of our CSUN freshmen plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree.

In 2015, 4,244 CSUN freshmen participated in the CIRP Freshman Survey at Orientation.

Why do students choose CSUN?

53% of students chose to attend CSUN because it “has a very good academic reputation.”

WHO ARE OUR FRESHMEN?

In 2015, CSUN freshmen participated in the CIRP Freshman Survey at Orientation.

53% of students chose to attend CSUN because it “has a very good academic reputation.”

Most CSUN freshmen want to go the extra mile and achieve a higher degree. 71.2% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree. 70.8% of our CSUN freshmen plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree.

Like freshmen at other public 4-year institutions, most CSUN freshmen want to go the extra mile and achieve a higher degree. 71.2% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree. 70.8% of our CSUN freshmen plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree.

However, while only 25.7% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions are considered “first-generation college students,” 52.2% of our CSUN freshmen are considered “first-generation college students.”

Like freshmen at other public 4-year institutions, most CSUN freshmen want to go the extra mile and achieve a higher degree. 71.2% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree. 70.8% of our CSUN freshmen plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree.

However, while only 25.7% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions are considered “first-generation college students,” 52.2% of our CSUN freshmen are considered “first-generation college students.”

Like freshmen at other public 4-year institutions, most CSUN freshmen want to go the extra mile and achieve a higher degree. 71.2% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree. 70.8% of our CSUN freshmen plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree.

However, while only 25.7% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions are considered “first-generation college students,” 52.2% of our CSUN freshmen are considered “first-generation college students.”

Like freshmen at other public 4-year institutions, most CSUN freshmen want to go the extra mile and achieve a higher degree. 71.2% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree. 70.8% of our CSUN freshmen plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree.

However, while only 25.7% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions are considered “first-generation college students,” 52.2% of our CSUN freshmen are considered “first-generation college students.”

Like freshmen at other public 4-year institutions, most CSUN freshmen want to go the extra mile and achieve a higher degree. 71.2% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree. 70.8% of our CSUN freshmen plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree.

However, while only 25.7% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions are considered “first-generation college students,” 52.2% of our CSUN freshmen are considered “first-generation college students.”

Like freshmen at other public 4-year institutions, most CSUN freshmen want to go the extra mile and achieve a higher degree. 71.2% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree. 70.8% of our CSUN freshmen plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree.

However, while only 25.7% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions are considered “first-generation college students,” 52.2% of our CSUN freshmen are considered “first-generation college students.”

Like freshmen at other public 4-year institutions, most CSUN freshmen want to go the extra mile and achieve a higher degree. 71.2% of freshmen from other 4-year institutions plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree. 70.8% of our CSUN freshmen plan on pursuing an advanced degree beyond a bachelor’s degree.