THEATRE CSUN
@theatrecsun
When it comes to director’s notes, I am always tempted to say as little as possible so as to not contaminate the audience’s perception of the play. In this case, however, I do want to take a moment to thank the Theatre faculty and staff, first for the opportunity and second for the support they have given, and then there are the scholars. Though a dark comedy, Our Lady of 121st Street has been brightened by the talent of our amazing CSUN students. It is their work and sacrifice that is responsible for any merit in this production. If you like the play, please tell your friends. And if you don’t like the play, tell your frenemies but help us get our students the full house they deserve!

Onward,

Guillermo Aviles-Rodriguez

P.S. As a practicing Catholic this production has likely increased the already considerable time I will need to spend in purgatory, so I hope you think it is all worth it.
