RAISING THE BAR

A Guide to Modernizing Salad Bars
INTRODUCTION

Every food service venue would love to expand its reach by bringing new customers to the cafeteria. By incorporating consumer trends into practice, cafeterias can secure a place in the competitive lunch market.

Baum + Whiteman, a food and restaurant consulting firm, predicts that building meals centered around vegetables will remain a top trend in 2017. They attribute this to innovations in vegetable preparations among chefs and the upswing of fast-casual salad chains that feature photogenic bowls of grains and seasonal greens.

Plant-based proteins are taking centerstage as they become increasingly mainstream. Chefs are at the forefront, bringing traditionally meat-based preparations to the plant world.

This toolkit will break down steps to leverage the power of these trends and fold them into institutional practice through the salad bar. The methods in this kit can be implemented in steps and modified as you learn which products your customers prefer, and which are most cost-effective. We will review elements that meet the modern customer’s expectations, and transform the flavors on your salad bar.

I. UPGRADE YOUR INGREDIENTS

Change starts with the food you buy. Buy better and varied produce. Cook more in-house, from scratch. We eat first with our eyes. Your salad bar sells based on how it looks. Get creative. Make it beautiful.

FRUIT

Fresh fruit brings sweetness, acidity and color to salads. Dried fruit can also be delicious salad bar toppings, but try to source products without added sugar.

- Grapefruit
- Oranges
- Strawberries
- Blueberries
- Raspberries
- Grapes
- Apples
- Nectarines
- Peaches
- Pears
- Mangoes
- Kiwi
- Watermelon
- Plums

VEGETABLES

Sourcing quality fresh vegetables signals to your customers that your cafeteria is on the cutting edge. Feature seasonal produce to take your selection to another level.

- Edamame
- Artichokes
- Beets
- Jicama
- Baby Bok Choy
- Asparagus
- Yellow Squash
- Cucumber
- Celery
- Green Onions
- Cauliflower
- Zucchini
- Kohlrabi
- Baby Potatoes
- Pumpkin
- Fennel
II. ELEVATE FLAVOR

Now that you have high quality produce- use freshly ground spices, fresh herbs, and spice mixes to transform them. Treat your vegetables like meat by applying a dry rub and roasting them. Or keep it fresh by turning raw ingredients into a readymade salad. Here are examples of simple dishes that take on new dimensions when dressed up.

PREPARED VEGETABLE DISHES:
- Roasted Beets with Lemon Zest & Thyme
- Turmeric & Coriander Cauliflower
- Berbere Sweet Potatoes
- Red Curried Carrots
- Mint & Dill Cucumbers
- Acorn Squash with Garam Masala

III. CUT ABOVE THE REST

Up the appeal of your salad bar by giving the ingredients fresh and creative knife cuts. Cuts should be delicate and bite-size to make food more appetizing and easier to eat.

RADISH
Use a mandoline to shave the radish into thin coins. Store in water to preserve crunch.

GREEN ONION
Rotate knife to a 45˚ angle from usual position and cut onions on a bias.

ZUCCHINI
Use a box grater [or mandoline with teeth fixture] to shave zucchini into noodles.

CELERY
Trim celery and cut rib into thirds. Slide the pieces over a mandoline with the flat side of the rib against your palm. Store in ice water until celery curls.

CARROT
Shave carrot ribbons with your peeler by holding one end by the tip and rotating, then hold the other tip and repeat.

FENNEL
Halve fennel and core if desired. Run bulb over the mandoline blade. Store in water to preserve crunch and color.
IV. ROTATE YOUR GRAINS

Ancient grains that were once underutilized are becoming household names. Grain-based bowls and salads have been widely embraced as healthy and delicious options. They add fiber to the salad bar, benefiting your customers’ waistlines by filling them up faster.

Many grains carry distinct nutty flavors that add depth to salads. Try out new grains from the list below on your salad bar weekly.

ANCIENT GRAINS

- Millet
- Amaranth
- Black Rice
- Farro
- Barley
- Quinoa
- Kamut
- Wheat Berries
- Buckwheat
- Spelt
- Bulgar
- Freekeh
- Sorghum
- Rye Berries

V. PUSH PLANT PROTEINS

Seeds, nuts, and legumes add a delicious bite to your salad bar. They bring texture and crunch into the mix while providing hearty plant-based protein. Create a custom seed mix to top salads. Bring out the natural earthy flavor of nuts by roasting them. Use spices and vinegars for heat and acid to brighten legumes.

SEEDS

- Sunflower
- Pumpkin
- Sesame
- Chia
- Flax
- Poppy
- Hemp

NUTS

- Almonds
- Walnuts
- Pistachios
- Cashews

- Chia, sesame, and hemp seeds

Legumes

SPICY ROASTED CHICKPEAS
Heat the oven to 400° and tossing dry chickpeas with a light coat of olive oil, chili pepper, paprika, and cumin to taste in a bowl. Spread the chickpeas evenly on a baking sheet and cook for 30 minutes. Serve as a crispy salad topping.
VI. MODERNIZE YOUR GREENS

It’s time to innovate past iceberg lettuce. Your customers expect to see colorful, exciting salad blends. Sourcing dark and cruciferous greens will give your customers an extra dose of crunch. Try adding these to the salad bar, or get creative and make a lettuce mix of your own.

- Arugula
- Brussels Sprouts, shredded
- Red, Green Cabbage, shredded
- Curly Kale
- Lacinato Kale
- Carrots Tops
- Turnip Greens
- Mustard Greens
- Beet Greens
- Broccoli, shredded
- Swiss Chard
- Mesclun
- Spinach
- Collard Greens

VII. SPICE IT UP!

Global spices can change the profile of your salad bar by making comforting flavors into accessible toppings. Develop your own house spice blend or fill up shakers with these old favorites.

ZA’ATAR [zah-tahr] is the Arabic name for an ancient herb blend that is still used in the Middle East, and typically includes dried herbs, sesame seeds, and salt.

NORI [nor-ee] is an edible seaweed commonly used as a garnish or sushi wrapper in Japanese cuisine.

PIMENTON [pim-en-tôn] is a foundational spice of Spanish cuisine, and is made from peppers that are dried and ground.

SHICHIMI TOGARASHI [shi-chim-ee tō-g-ar-ashee] is Japanese for “7-flavor chile pepper” and often includes Sichuan pepper, shiso, garlic, hemp seed, poppy seed, sesame seed, ginger, citrus peel, and nori.
VIII. DRESS IT FROM SCRATCH

Offer a homemade dressing option to get your customers dreaming about their daily salad. With just a handful of ingredients, take your salad dressings from processed to pro. Using vegetables in your dressings is the perfect way to bring color and a boost of fiber into the mix. Here are some ideas to bring bold new dressings to the table.

For each recipe combine the following ingredients in a blender, emulsify the vinaigrettes by adding the oil last, and season with salt and pepper to taste. The recipes listed below will be sufficient for your staff to taste and modify for your operations.

TAHINI & MISO DRESSING
- 1/3 cup Tahini

XI. DESIGN YOUR LAYOUT

Use a layout grid as a visualization tool to help plan and cost the salad bar, integrating the new options at your own pace. In the examples below, the first layout has been integrated with the ingredients from one new recipe. The second layout incorporates two new salad options. The ingredients for each of the new salads are starred.

In a study by Cornell’s Food Psychology Lab, products with descriptive labels sold 27% more and were seen by customers as both a better value and of higher quality than the same products without descriptive labels.

Help your customers visualize details about the ingredients including how they were sourced, their color, texture, and preparation. The menus below describe the same dishes, but which would you rather eat?

Lunch Menu

- Cauliflower salad with dried fruit and a mustard dressing
- Grilled mushroom, chickpeas, artichoke and lemon dressing

Lunch Menu

- Shaved cauliflower, creamy mustard seed vinaigrette, pickled cucumber, edamame, golden raisins
- Grilled Portobello, crispy chickpeas, marinated artichokes, roasted lemon vinaigrette and fresh herbs
