

Lecture by
Dr. Imed Bouslama, Fulbright Scholar from Tunisia at UC Berkeley

Imed Bouslama received his Ph.D. in American History in 2005 from University of Manouba, Tunisia. He has worked on many topics including “The Reagan Administration and the Welfare State: The illusion of a Conservative Revolution.” He teaches American history, Middle Eastern Studies, American Foreign Policy and American political thought. His publications include articles on “President Bush and Neoconservatives,” “The Clinton Administration and the Peace Process”, and “Academic Freedom in the USA”. Currently, Dr. Bouslama is a Fulbright Research Scholar at U.C. Berkeley working on different projects and courses including: 1) Schools of American historiography, 2) The isolationist tradition in American foreign policy, and 3) The historiography of American foreign policy.

When: ~~Tuesday~~ April 24, 7:00 PM

Where: Whitsett Room, 451, Sierra Hall, CSUN

Sponsored by: Middle Eastern and Islamic Studies Program; Gender and Women’s Studies; Anthropology; and Sociology Departments.