

Want to explore your personality and talents more in-depth?

Want some real-world skills when you graduate?

Want to start a career in the Humanities or related field?

Examples include teaching, tutoring, publishing, editing, technical writing, creative writing, interpreting, copywriting, human resources, administration, management, corporate training, etc.

Social science majors are also encouraged to sign up as many of these skills apply to this area of study as well.

Sign up for HUMANITIES 300: Career Readiness and Professional Career Development

Section #15204 Online Synchronous, Tues/Thurs 11:00 am-12:15pm - 3 units

Satisfies GE UpperLifelong Learning degree requirement

This course offers in-depth career readiness skills and will enhance the student's ability to transition from college to life post-graduation. Students will explore both career and graduate school options and it will aid students in examining their interests, personality traits, and talents and how they can be applied in a real-world environment. They will investigate current trends and outlooks in careers in the humanities like teaching, publishing, editing, writing, human resources, and administration. Moreover, this class will explore career tools such as resumes, CVs, LinkedIn, and the CSUN Career Center preparing students for their entrance into their chosen career field. Students will also hear from expert guest speakers

Register now for spring 2024!!