

PROTEIN COMPLEMENTS

Dairy products, soy products, fish, poultry, and meat are complete proteins — that is, they contain all the essential amino acids that the body requires. Therefore, incomplete proteins may combine with each other or a body. Nuts and seeds, grains, vegetables, and legumes are complete protein to become a complete protein.

